3 Cultural Notes

★ Crossword puzzle:

A popular word game taking the form of white and dark squares. Squares in which answers begin are numbered. The dark squares are used to separate the words or phrases. The goal of the game is to fill the white squares with letters, forming words or phrases, by solving clues which lead to the answers.

(An example)

1		2
3				4
		5

Across

1. Sheep sound (3)
3. Neither liquid nor gas (5)
5. Humor (3)

Down

1. Road passenger transport (3)
2. Permit (5)
4. Shortened form of Dorothy (3)

★ Just call me Bill:

To ask someone to call you by your first name shows your desire to have a less formal relationship with him/her. Similarly, to call someone by his/her first name is also a sign of showing closeness. However, you are not supposed to do so to a new friend until you are told to.

★ Addressing people:

In the Chinese language, people tend to address others by adding job titles to their family names, such as “张老师”, “李经理”, but in the English language, “Teacher Zhang” and “Manager Li” would be inappropriate. However, there are job titles, such as “professor”, “doctor”, that can be followed by family names. Therefore, it's OK to address certain people as “Professor Wang” or “Doctor Liu”.

4 Business Notes

★ Company structure:

Company structure determines how power and responsibility are assigned and controlled, and how information flows between levels of management. Although different companies may vary in their structures, there are a few core sections that are necessary in most companies, such as Production Department, Sales & Marketing Department, Accounting Department and HR Department.

★ Job duty:

Job duties are tasks you must do in a job. They are the responsibilities you have for a particular job. A job description lists the duties you will do in your job. For example, a secretary will answer telephones, arrange meetings and make schedules. The activities you are required to perform for any occupation are your job duties.

★ Company operation:

It usually refers to the work processes within a company or the relationships between different departments of a company. In the daily operation of a company, there are some typical work processes such as the production process, the ordering and delivering process, and the recruitment process.

★ Company orientation:

The introductory stage at which a new employee is told of the company's history, beliefs and values, long-term goals, and management structure. He or she is given specific information, such as the company's products, markets and the employee conduct. Company policies about promotions and vacations, and regulations regarding health and safety are also made known during this period.

★ Board of Directors:

It's the governing body of a firm. Its members (directors) are elected normally by the shareholders to govern the firm and look after their interests. The Board has the final say in decision-making and takes responsibility for the results of the firm's policies and actions. Members of the Board usually include inside (executive) directors as well as outside (non-executive) directors.

★ Shareholder:

A shareholder is an individual or company that legally owns one or more shares of a firm. The shareholders together own the company. They are given special rights including the right to vote for the elections of Board members.

★ CEO:

A CEO is the top executive responsible for a firm's overall operations and performance. As the leader of the firm, he or she serves as the main link between the Board of Directors and the firm's various parts or levels. One of the major duties of a CEO is to maintain company policies and carry out the Board's decisions.
