Samuel Johnson does not want to go to university. He thinks he won't learn any practical skills there, so when he finishes the ninth grade, he will choose a vocational school. At the vocational school, he wants to learn useful knowledge and practical skills. There are many different types of classes for students to take depending on their interests. Some of Samuel's friends are already studying mechanics or computer programming. Some are learning cookery or accounting. A vocational school prepares young people for society by teaching them practical skills. Samuel is a hard-working student, so he is sure to find a good job in the future.

Dear Xiaoming,

I'm in a new school now. The school is very large. There are three grades in our school. Each grade has six classes. There are 40 students in each class. We learn Chinese, English, maths, computer science and so on. Most of us like to study English. We all think English is very useful. For example, many machine instructions are in English. We have a large library with lots of books. The playground is very big. After class, the students do sports and play games there. We all like our school and we're very happy. Hope to see you soon.
